PD01: Countering hate speech and the use of social media as a space for dialogue

Description: Hate speech distorts understandings of social forces, spreads misinformation, and aggravates prejudice and discrimination. It can affect power dynamics, creating rifts and mobilising groups in ways that divide communities. In some societies, specific understandings of freedom of expression and hate speech are the topic of debate. The misuse of religion misused to legitimate violence in many conflict settings is a related concern. Religious leaders and faith-based organizations can play roles in preventing incitement and hate speech, reducing tensions in their communities. The United Nations Plan of Action for Religious Leaders and Actors to Prevent Incitement to Violence that Could Lead to Atrocity Crimes in 2017 reflects a commitment to better engage religious institutions in countering hate speech and incitement to violence. The session will explore both actual and potential ways in which religious leaders can provide alternative narratives and engage with their respective constituencies in respectful discourse.

Guiding questions:

- What capacities need to be developed further within religious communities and beyond, in order to identify, address, and prevent hate speech?
- What kind of partnerships best address hate speech on a policy level?
- What concrete activities of religious actors can address gaps in how hate speech is dealt with by policy makers?

PD02: Religious cultural heritage, human dignity and sustainable development

Description: Religious cultural heritage is emerging as a new engagement point for reaching the United Nations' Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs). This adds an important dimension to ongoing work on protecting sacred sites. New thinking points to ways that protecting and cultivating religious cultural heritage can advance many SDGs—for example, by having significant positive impacts on sustainable growth, on key peace and justice institutions, on sustainable cities and communities, on environmental protection, and on strengthening key partnerships. This presents an opportunity to build on the United Nations Plan of Action to Safeguard Religious Sites, which was spearheaded by the United Nations Alliance of Civilizations last year while linking this initiative to broader efforts to connect religious cultural heritage efforts with the SDG agenda. Sacred sites serve as a meeting point for developing of dialogical civic spaces and an area for exchange in the religious and cultural spheres. At the same time, work in this area has become more complex because shared and contested sites have been weaponised as focal points of acts of religious or ethnic hatred and of state-sponsored geopolitical agendas. Further, sacred places have multiple identities as sites both of living religious activity and of cultural heritage and memory. This raises a number of challenges of how to manage a complex custodianship relationships of religious associations and heritage authorities without infringing upon religious autonomy and freedom of religion or belief on the one hand and wider civic and cultural expectations on the other This session will build on the important work and leadership of the United Nations Alliance of Civilizations and other stakeholders to suggest important ways that the safeguarding of sacred sites and religious cultural heritage can help further broader initiatives to advance sustainable development goals.

Guiding questions:

- How can the preservation of religious cultural heritage best contribute to the building of dialogical and inclusive civic spaces while addressing valid stakeholder concerns?
- How can religious cultural heritage initiatives best further the Sustainable Development Goals agenda and how are the responsibilities of concerned stakeholders altered as a result?
- What are the potential trajectories for making the UNAOC Plan of Action to Safeguard Religious Sites as an opportunity to consolidate the emerging efforts of other international and national initiatives for preservation of religious cultural heritage and for linking them with concrete policy action points to sustainable development?
- What is the position of international human rights mechanisms on places of worship?
- How can religious cultural heritage initiatives best further the Sustainable Development Goals agenda and how can the human rights responsibilities of concerned stakeholders be implemented?

PD03: Human trafficking and modern slavery

Description: The horrors of human trafficking and different forms of modern slavery cause deep suffering to many who have little capacity to defend themselves. International law, police action and national efforts address some facets of the complex phenomenon but far more needs to be done. Strong religious voices give a high priority to this topic. An array of religious initiatives addresses the issues, but coordination among them and with secular actors is generally poor. The commitment to SDG target 8.7, to eradicate modern slavery, frames this round table which looks at strengthening both moral leadership and practical means to bring these scourges to an end so that relevant corporations, organizations and individuals exercise their due diligence to slavery-proof their supply chains.

Guiding questions:

- What are next steps as religious actors press to end modern slavery? Can best practices be expanded?
- What partnerships can be reinforced to bolster action including with business and public authorities?
- How can G20 work with religious organizations to reflect the issue's priority and urgency?

PL02 Plenary on COVID-19

Description: As the world struggles with the COVID-19 pandemic, faith-based organizations and religious actors' rapid, yet informed responses have been crucial to support the collective efforts. Reaching out in support of those in need, comforting those who are suffering, feeding those who are hungry, praying for those who are struggling, promoting good health practices together with health authorities, and advocating for help for the most vulnerable are some examples of such activity. At the same time, responding to hate speech, stigmatization, and the other negative dynamics that hinder interreligious relations and social cohesion in the time of a pandemic remains a crucial task in which religious actors have unique leverage. This plenary is dedicated to COVID-19 and the challenges it brings to interreligious relations and social cohesion, bearing in mind the roles of religious and interreligious actors in responding to such challenges.

PD04: Faith communities in partnerships to address COVID-19 pandemic

Description: During the COVID-19 pandemic, faith communities have played crucial roles, both in partnerships to address public health challenges and to keep societies functioning during lockdowns and quarantines. Innovations including use of technologies may have lasting effects beyond COVID-19. From health messages and online shopping to telemedicine, from remote work and video conference calls to distance learning, the COVID-19 crisis is accelerating trends of the last decade. Religious leaders can contribute to the urgent challenges of taking lessons learned to build trustworthy information systems. In a post-COVID-19 world, how can health systems and technology more broadly reinforce human-centred and inclusive approaches?

PD05: Religious actors and multilateral responses to the COVID-19 crisis: Priorities and accountability

Description: The inequalities that the COVID-19 crisis reveals demand urgent action by world leaders. Multilateral responses that G20 leaders are considering must focus squarely on vulnerable communities, assuring that resources are used to further recovery and rebuilding and take fully into account priority needs. The essential spirit of solidarity and equity that is a foundation for the G20 ethos is echoed by religious communities across the world during the crisis, both in remarkable mobilization of resources to serve communities and in interreligious action grounded in commitment to human rights and human dignity. Religious communities have distinctive capacities to identify, serve, and direct attention to areas of need. Cooperating in efforts to assure integrity and efficiency in relief measures (both debt relief and social protection programs) is a demanding but fitting role for faith communities in this time of crisis, with the ethical teachings and pragmatic experience of different religious traditions invaluable contributors to these objectives. The measures taken in the months ahead to respond to urgent, critical needs must be undertaken with a view towards the future, building effective cooperative arrangements involving multisector actors, including religious communities, that reflect commitment to addressing inequalities, directing resources towards the most vulnerable, and assuring fully transparent and robust accountability mechanisms for use of public funds.

Guiding questions:

- Can we highlight examples of how faith communities have lived principles of solidarity during the COVID-19 crisis and what lessons emerge?
- What mechanisms can best assure the inclusion of religious actors in multilateral responses to the COVID-19 pandemic and efforts to prepare for future complex global emergencies?
- What practical mechanisms exist or can be designed to link positive values in religious teachings to the ethical imperative to focus on vulnerable communities?
- How can partnerships engaging religious actors and policy makers promote robust transparency accountability mechanisms specifically addressed to pandemic relief measures?
- Looking to the long-term, how within the G20 framework can religious communities form part of strategies that build national integrity systems and implement anti-corruption strategies?

In the context of COVID-19 emergency, women, children, the elderly, the disabled, and some minority communities experience distinctive and severe challenges. PL03 Plenary on empowerment of women, youth and vulnerable people

Description: This plenary focuses on the role and potential of religious actors and communities to contribute to the creation of structures which more effectively contribute to the empowerment of marginalised and vulnerable groups, particularly women and youth. It will also explore how religious communities are collaborating with political decision-makers to develop and implement policies that promote equality of opportunity, especially for underserved groups. Equal opportunities for all will allow for a thriving global society. However, persistent social and economic inequalities between men and women continue to shape the reality in education, economic independence, health provision and security. Religious communities and institutions are influential partners when it comes to shaping these areas and have, in some cases, a long history to draw upon.

PD07: Education that supports peace, religious literacy, and cultural diversity

Description: *The values focus of education, that includes inclusion and religious literacy, takes on increasing importance in the COVID-19 era. A priority is to address school systems that present manipulative discourses and narratives portraying religions, cultures, cosmogonies and/or worldviews as antagonistic and irreconcilable. PD08: Addressing needs of refugees and migrants and advancing solutions, with a focus on women and youth

Description: Never in history has the world seen more people displaced than today. Two far-ranging global compacts, one for refugees and one for migrants, reflect commitments by states to action that promotes more inclusive and humane policies and active efforts to seek resolution to conflicts that drive forced migration. Trends, however, point towards weakening responsibilities towards people seeking refuge and urgently needed support for humanitarian needs. Religious actors are central to this agenda-setting process that makes it possible to address the needs of refugees and migrants and facilitate holistic responses to a central challenge of our times. Religious actors can provide practical and spiritual support and guidance on the path towards solutions.

Guiding questions:

- In what way can religious actors and communities influence policy towards refugees and migrants to counter the trend towards weakening responsibility?

- How can religious communities best be involved in efforts to empower refugees and migrants as active members of host country communities and integration in third countries?

PD09: Inequality: gender, racism, and structural discrimination

Description: Inequality, of opportunity and of perceptions of what is fair and what is not, are central issues that global policy makers need to address. That includes religious leaders and communities, both as prophetic voices seeking action and accountability, and in addressing inequalities within their own communities. This panel discussion frames the issues around human dignity and notions of fairness, including obstacles and opportunities for economic and social participation. How do differing traditions reflect and apply cultural and religious norms? How can religious communities contribute to healing with respect to patterns of racial discrimination and reversing structural injustice? With respect to gender, women's equality is a central issue, from wage gaps, exclusion from political processes, and undue burdens of caring. How can religious communities contribute more to empowering women, especially when traditional cultural norms often perpetuate inequality including in many religious institutions and practices.

Guiding questions:

- How can religious communities contribute to solving problems of racial injustice?
- How might purposeful approaches including inclusive dialogue processes empower women from all strata of societies to play more active and leading roles in interreligious relationships?
- What are the consequences of structural inequality on social cohesion?
- How have religious communities contributed to support vulnerable women?

PL04 Plenary on religious action to address threats of climate change

Description: As climate change becomes more severe, it is increasingly seen as a moral and existential issue. Different faith groups around the world have strongly advocated in favour of tougher measures to safeguard the planet. They have entered into robust partnerships among and beyond religious communities to protect rainforests, conserve natural resources and safeguard ecosystems threatened by climate change. The problems of our planet and the consequences of climate change are not only problems of science and technology, they are also of moral, ethical and spiritual nature - about how we live our lives, use and distribute resources, and how much everyone is willing to contribute. This plenary session provides an insight into existing and new initiatives of religious actors in their response to climate change and the ways in which they can support policy makers to push forward the environmental agenda.

PD10: Ecological challenges: rainforest protection and purposeful action to protect the environment

Description: Environmental degradation, corrupt practices, encroachment on indigenous lands and rainforests, and other human rights violations present grave challenges around the globe. Most faith and indigenous communities embrace an ethical and spiritual responsibility to protect the environment including rainforests. Their advocacy and promotion of sustainable management should be heard and heeded. Faith and indigenous communities drive urgent actions in many places that promise to restore degraded forests and increase afforestation and reforestation. Their commitments point to sustainable solutions in line with international standards and local development priorities in the effected environments. The panel discussion will build on the Interfaith Rainforest Initiative launched in June 2017 at the Nobel Peace Center in Oslo, Norway and on other faith-initiated efforts along similar lines.

Guiding questions:

- How can religious actors involved in dialogue, negotiations, and civil activism show a constructive path forward to protect our environment?

PD11: Practical partnerships to address climate change and its consequences

Description: Religious communities are responding to calls for action to address moral challenges from the local to the global level. To advance global commitments to protect our planet, new coalitions need to be formed and strengthened to facilitate practical partnerships among faith leaders, indigenous communities, and other sectors (such as government, business and civil society). Enhancing partnerships and access to financial and technical support is essential for many communities to realize their priorities and invest in appropriate responses.

Guiding questions:

- In what way are faith leaders and religious communities uniquely positioned to address the issues of climate change?
- What are examples of successful coalitions among faith-based organizations and secular organizations?

PD12: The rule of law, human rights and religious rights

Description: The rule of law, human rights, and religion are conceptually interlinked. Efforts to promote social justice, freedom of religion, and religious pluralism require that we develop strategic thought and leadership approaches that take into account the complex ways in which religious liberty rights interact with other fundamental rights enshrined in the International Convention on Human Rights. Laws and policies need to reflect the understanding that the right of free exercise of religion protects all religious beliefs and communities, including the non-religious ones; this requires respect for religious plurality and equality principles, and has to be balanced against other liberty and equality rights where they are in conflict.

Guiding questions:

- How can religious teachings contribute to promote human rights and enhance rule of law?
- How can law protect religious values and beliefs, as well as religious diversity and pluralism?
- When can government legitimately interfere with religion or religious issues and to what extent?

PL05 Plenary on Commitment of faith networks to disaster-risk reduction

Description: Religious communities and leaders are essential and influential responders when their communities face upheaval and natural disasters, including health crises such as the COVID-19 pandemic. With their moral authority and familiarity with their communities, they are able to provide early warnings, alleviate human suffering, build up resilience and provide leadership when it comes to making important changes to people’s behaviour and attitudes. In 2020, religious actors have played an important role in preserving human dignity, raising morale and building practical partnerships with local authorities to effectively address the COVID-19 pandemic. This plenary will reflect on the needs and achievements of religious actors in disaster response and advancing the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs). It will also explore the partnerships within and among faith networks as well as with policy makers on every level which support and empower them to act most effectively.
